

3 RED FLAGS TO IDENTIFY STORM CHASING ROOFING SCAMS

Storm chasers are roofing companies that come into an area after a major weather event and try to take advantage of unsuspecting customers who need help. They often leave with incomplete work or use poor quality materials, or use unsafe building practices and if something goes wrong, the customer is left with no recourse since these companies are out of town and often not licensed or insured.

1

When they aren't local. They might use an out of state phone number or tags. They may even claim to have a local office to make you feel better.

2

They ask for payment up front. Storm chasers will often ask for the full amount of payment right away, even if that means paying your insurance deductible for you.

3

They do not have a license or insurance.
